

A memorable week in Germany

Our mobility started with landing on Hamburg's airport. We were very excited to meet our hosts and start the week. We were surprised by running people with posters in their hands, we hugged each other and were extremely happy to meet again or to meet somebody new.

The week we spent there was unforgettable. We met a lot of new people, with some of them we had so much in common, with others we were completely different but in some way we were alike. We improved our English skills, we were presenting our presentations, which we have done on workshops with people from other countries. This was very helpful, we had different opinions about some topics but we found a way to understand each other and work on groups, as a team. I think that this is a very important skill, which can help us in life. We learned a lot about the media, how shocking news can affect us, how to make a difference between fake news and the real ones. How global problems make feel each one of us and what we can do to help. We discussed everything we have done in front of the team. We learned about Germany's culture and traditions. We had a walk around Schleswig, we visited Christmas bazar and we were really impressed. We had a trip to Hamburg, we visited Elbphilharmonie, which was extremely impressive and we made a lot of photos there. We went to the Christmas bazar and we had some free time with our friends.

One of the best part of our experience was the visit of The Viking's museum. It was very interesting and informative. We had a walk with torches to the restaurant which made us feel like we are from another century without mobile phones and technology. I am impressed about that walk because I am sure that it would never come to my mind to walk through the forest with torch. And this was one of the most exciting things that week, we were talking and laughing all the time.

In conclusion I can say that it was extremely helpful experience. We developed our English skills, we learned a lot about the media, made a lot of new friends and with some we still communicate. We were close to Germany's culture and History. And no matter how different we are there is always somethings that we have in common.
